WHAT'S ON PBS

The largest group of TV stations to go digital this year are PBS affiliates, which often devote prime time entirely to high-def programming. Since they have more flexibility in scheduling than the commercial networks, local show times may vary. Much of the PBS HDTV library consists of travelogues like flyovers of Tuscany and closeups of estate gardens set to New Age music. These oft-repeated video postcards are great for wowing your neighbors with high-def content without adding charges to your cable bill.

Debuting September 28 to October 4 is the seven-part HDTV series The Blues, produced by Martin Scorsese and made up of films by noted directors Mike Figgis, Wim Wenders, Charles Burnett, Marc Levin, Richard Pearce, Scorsese himself, and Clint Eastwood (shown below talking with Kansas City jazz and blues pianist Jay "Hootie" McShann).
